ABOUT CHRONIC WASTING DISEASE

Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD) has been detected in free-ranging and captive herds in 29 states, including Louisiana. CWD has been detected in deer urine and remains on the landscape for an indefinite period once introduced. Due to the continued threat of CWD spreading in Louisiana, precautionary steps are being taken to minimize introduction of the disease. New testing procedures have been made available to producers of deer urine that can detect the presence of CWD in urine-based products, thereby significantly decreasing the risk of using the tested product within the state.

CWD is a transmissible spongiform encephalopathy disease characterized by spongy degeneration of brain tissue resulting in emaciation, abnormal behavior, loss of bodily functions and death in members of the deer family. CWD is transmitted via oral ingestion of infectious prions which are shed through saliva, urine, feces and decaying carcasses. The prions are ingested by deer as they are exposed to infectious soil, plants or other materials. Hunters in Louisiana can help prevent the spread of CWD by complying with the new natural deer urine regulation.
